

Greetings!

A study on the profession of interior design is being conducted, and your help is needed.

You have been randomly selected to participate in a study entitled Interior Design Knowledge and the Public's Health, Safety and Welfare. University of Minnesota professors Denise Guerin and Caren Martin are conducting this survey to identify how your interior design knowledge contributes to the public's health, safety and welfare.

They have created a brief online survey for you to complete. The survey consists of about 20 questions and should only take about 15 minutes to complete. The survey will be available until May 17.

Your response is essential to the completion of this study. The BOK study is a research project that NCIDQ contributes to along with the American Society of Interior Designers, the International Interior Design Association, the Interior Designers of Canada, the Interior Design Educators Council and the Council for Interior Design Accreditation. It is a major project that affects the interior design profession.

We ask that you please take the time to complete this short study to help improve your industry. Your response is requested by May 17. We appreciate your contribution to the research by taking the time to complete it.
